world leaders in conference installations

2004 Olympic Games press centre

Highly prestigious contract to supply an electronic conference system to the 2004 Olympic Games in Athens. Auditel, one of the worlds leading manufacturers and suppliers of conference systems, is providing equipment for the Games main press centre, where it will be used to coordinate international media coverage.

The sophisticated system includes 800 customised units, incorporating microphone, electronic voting, language selector and identity card reader, and features equipment for 12 interpreter booths and 11 CCTV cameras, which can be controlled automatically by the Auditel central conference system computer and software.

The Olympic Games contract was secured by Auditel in the face of fierce international competition, and is part of the company's ongoing expansion.

Bayan Palace conference centre

The Ministry of Public Works sought to build a conference centre as well as residences for dignitaries visiting Kuwait. Auditel systems were installed throughout the complex including the main conference building. This comprises of a conference hall and an auditorium with a seating capacity for 1,200. The Main auditorium serves major international conferences as well as National Theatre to conduct ballet and concert performances. After the Iraqi invasion, most of the buildings within the complex were badly damaged. PACE undertook the damage assessments for the buildings as well as producing tender documents, design and supervision for the restoration of the conference centre. Auditel was also involved in phase II of this huge project, which added a Guest Palace and Banquet Hall.

Sunderland City council chambers

Auditel equipment was used for the upgrade of audio-visual conference and presentation equipment in the refurbishment of the City of Sunderland Civic Centre Council Chambers, the administrative centre for Sunderland City Council and home to most Council meetings.

Auditel's contract winning solution needed to draw upon the vast, in-house experience in conference installations to create a new, modular system.

This modular design can now allow for the next phase of the Councils vision, for live broadcast of meetings on the internet and video conferencing, which will help to bring Sunderland to the forefront as a truly '21st Century City.'

Ghanian Parliament building

When Ghana relocated its parliament building to the Kwame Nkrumah conference centre in Accra, Auditel was chosen for the supply of the conference equipment. Through its agent in Ghana, Auditel worked closely with the architect to provide a conference and voting system for the Parliament chamber. This comprised microphone and voting electronics at each of the members desks. Voting results are shown on two alphanumeric displays in the chamber. The system is computer controlled.

Auditel was also responsible for the supply of a CCTV system for the Parliament building. Baggage and personal security equipment were also supplied for the security of the parliament.

National Assembly for Wales

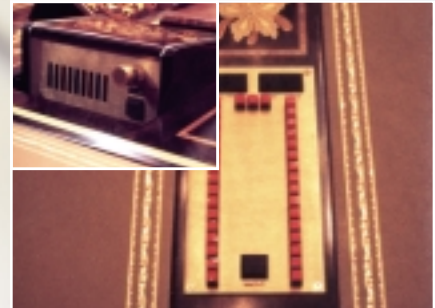

Auditel was chosen by the National Assembly for Wales to supply their conference equipment which was computer controlled with microphone, voting and card reading facilities. In addition to controlling the facilities, the conference PC was integrated with the broadcast camera control system and the caption control system provides details of each member speaking. Once collated, the voting results are copied to the Assembly's server for use by member services.

Kensington and Chelsea chambers

When the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea were looking to refurbish their microphone and voting system, in the Council chamber, they chose Auditel. Auditel provided a customised solution to the council's requirements. Each panel is a different size, specifically designed to the existing tables. The system provides for a microphone and voting at each councillors seat. The meeting is controlled from the Clerks position, either using a mimic layout of the seats or through a control panel.

Ministry of Interior - Saudi Arabia

Supply of equipment for two committee rooms and the main conference hall. Of particular note for this venue were the delegate units. These units were custom designed, the specification required that the committee room tables be used in either conference mode, or clear with no obstructions for other uses. These units were built into a metal frame, which was designed to rotate about a central pivot point. The loudspeaker, microphone, switches and LED indicators were presented on a gold plated panel. The whole was encased in veneered wood by furniture manufacturers in Italy. Thus when the units were not in use they could be rotated to provide a flat table.

Simon Fraser University - Vancouver

The Simon Fraser University is a world class conference facility that contains 17 meeting rooms in addition to the Asia Pacific Hall and is housed in a restored historic building, originally constructed in 1920 for the Toronto Dominion Bank. Auditel equipment was chosen by the university as the conference microphone and simultaneous interpretation system for the Asia Pacific Hall. The 154 position system features computer controlled delegate name handling, electronic voting, local sound reinforcement at each delegate position, automated camera control (which projects the delegate's face automatically upon microphone activation) and 8 language simultaneous interpretation. The microphones can be controlled by both computer and a mimic control console (shown above) in tandem by an operator and the chairman.

Queen Elizabeth II conference centre

In the very heart of London, the award winning Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre specialises in events of 40 to 1,000 delegates, and offers the finest facilities for meeting planners in the UK. The Centre combines modern comfort with the very latest in technology. The Churchill Auditorium, the Whittle, Flemming and Elizabeth Windsor rooms are just some of the rooms that were equipped with Auditel conferencing and interpretation systems. All these function rooms are cleverly designed for total flexibility in layout styles and delegate numbers.

Iranian Parliament building

Supply of a complete voting and sound communications system for the Ministry of Housing in conjunction with the Sony Corporation of Dubai, for the supply of the TV broadcast equipment. The installation covers sound reinforcement, voting systems, audio and TV in the new parliament chamber for 316 members, plus a secretariat and 18 separate committee rooms. The whole system is computer-controlled and linked to a central TV centre which automatically activates cameras to pick up on the current speaker.
